Facts! Facts!

What a great amount of meaning these five letters embrace. Facts make the Father of our Country the hero of truth. Facts have brought many a one to the gallows. Facts was our corner stone. We build our foundation on facts. Our success has been due mainly to facts. Whatever Saur has advertised has always been facts, and in order to increase his trade, if that is possible, he will always stick to truth, which is plain facts. And it is a matter of pleasure to purchasers to know that they can buy goods from a first-class house with the full knowledge that what they buy are as represented.

Now, of course, Saur does not exactly boast of this fact, as this is as it should be, but nevertheless it is none the less true. Saur will warrant you at all times that he will give you your money's worth in exchange for your "lucre," and he has always endeavored to sell goods in such a manner as to give not alone entire satisfaction, but to insure your future patronage. He always carries as complete a stock as it is in his power to procure. He never lags to get the best drugs, medicines and books, and in securing the latest novelties the season affords. And now that the Holidays are about upon us he has a most attractive stock of Books and Stationery, Christmas and New Year Cards, Albums, Diaries, School Books, Juvenile Books, and in fact everything in the book and stationery line, and many articles suitable for presents during the holiday season. A full line of Teacher's and Family Bibles, at very low rates. Toilet and Fancy Articles in great profusion, and at such remarkably low prices that you will be astonished beyond measure upon learning them. Saur's Drug and Patent Medicine Department contains every known thing in the medical world, and whatever ailment you may have, a remedy can always be found at his store. Drugs and Medicines all pure and fresh, and nothing sold only as represented. Saur has for years been the King of Paints and Oils. In this department you can find the best brands of White Lead and Mixed and Colored Paints, among which is his celebrated Diamond White Lead. Oils of all kinds, and a stock of brushes surpassed by none. Brushes of every known description. The Wall Paper Department contains a selection of papers of the latest styles, and at very low prices, in fact so low that the poorest need not go without having their walls neatly and comfortably covered. A large stock of Window Shades, both paper and cloth, of the latest styles. There is nothing which makes a home feel and look more comfortable than nice neat wall paper upon the walls and ceiling and stylish window shades hung at the windows. Saur makes a special effort to keep a large stock of these goods on hand at all seasons of the year, so that his customers cannot fail to find what they wish, and he cordially invites an inspection of his goods, whether you wish to buy or not. You will find no one more ready and willing to wait upon customers than the "Little Dutchman" and his clerks. This is another fact which makes Saur's store so popular with the people. Remember, what is stated are all facts, now stop in Saur's Mammoth Drug and Book House and see them verified.

Statistics compiled in Germany show that forty-one servant girls out of 1,000,000 commit suicide. Of the 1,000,000 doctors, 163 take their own lives; while the proportion of lawyers is two-sevenths, and for scholars and literary men 618.

The best on earth, can truly be said of Griggs' Glycine Salve, which is a sure, safe and speedy cure of cuts, bruises, scalds, burns, wounds and all other sores. Will positively cure piles, tetter and all skin eruptions. Try this wonder healer. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Only 25 cents. Sold by J. C. Saur.

WILD EXCITEMENT ON BOTH SIDES OF THE RIO GRANDE.

Cutting's Sentence of One Year at Hard Labor Rouses the Texans to Fury—Companies of Minute Men Organized in El Paso and Citizens Everywhere Preparing for the Worst.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 8.—The El Paso, Tex., correspondent of the Globe-Democrat telegraphs that sentence was pronounced on Cutting last evening. It is one year's imprisonment at hard labor and $600 fine. If he cannot pay the fine he will have to serve one hundred days longer. Medina, who caused all the trouble, has leave to sue Cutting in a civil suit for damages. The question of censuring the American consul, Brigham, and asking for his removal is referred to the supreme court at Chihuahua.

As sentence was pronounced upon Cutting the prisoner turned slightly pale, but was otherwise thoroughly composed. When the reading of the sentence was finished, he asked in a loud voice of the court, at the same time pointing to Medina: "About the $600, is that creature to get any of it?" At this point Consul Brigham interposed to stop him. "If the prisoner uses insulting language," said the judge, "I can add something to the term of his sentence." Judge Brigham assured the court that neither he nor Cutting meant any disrespect to it. "Let us understand," said Judge Brigham, "just what this is for."

"It is for the publication on the other side of an article which is held to have vitiated a reconciliation made on this side."

"And this act on the other side," continued Judge Brigham, "was construed on this side as a contempt of court?"

CUTTING'S RESOLUTE STAND. To this the court replied in the negative. The court then turned to the prisoner and asked: "Do you stand under the protection of your government?"

"I do," replied Mr. Cutting. "Do you wish to take an appeal to the Supreme Court?" the judge asked. "I have no appeal to make except to the Government of the United States."

"If you should desire to take an appeal," said Judge Zubia, "you have five days in which to give notice. Do you wish to sign the proceedings of this court?"

"I sign nothing."

"Do you wish to express satisfaction or dissatisfaction with the sentence?"

"No, sir; I have never recognized your court or jurisdiction, and do not recognize its right to imprison me for one hour."

Cutting was then taken to jail and will be sent to Chihuahua in a day or two.

GREAT EXCITEMENT OVER THE SENTENCE. No sooner was the fact of Cutting's sentence known than both towns on the Mexican and the American side were wild with excitement over the matter. Two secret meetings were held here, and companies of minute men were organized. The merchants fear harm if the soldiers are not promptly on hand. They realize that congress only can declare war, but the superior number of Mexican soldiers in Paso del Norte would play havoc with the single company at Fort Bliss, one mile from El Paso. Arms and ammunition are secretly organizing so as to act on the defensive. Their voice is unanimous for the vindication of American honor and the protection of our citizens. The Mexicans, too, are angry at the tone of our press and people are fearful of violence on account of the numerous mass meetings which are being held.

MEXICANS ON TEXAS SOIL. A dispatch from Rio Grande city, Tex., says a heavy force of Mexican revolutionists crossed the river into Texas on Thursday night. A troop of the 8th United States Cavalry was ordered yesterday from Ringold barracks to pursue and disarm them.

DALLAS, TEX., Aug. 10.—At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a telegram passed through here from an official at Washington to an official at El Paso, which read as follows:

"Secretary Bayard has just made a final demand upon the Mexican Government for the immediate surrender of Cutting."

When this dispatch was bulletined it created the liveliest interest. Everybody is talking war and praising Secretary Bayard's firmness.

All She Asked. [Boston Courier.]

"And you say you would die for me, George?"

"Die for you! Yes a thousand deaths."

"You are a noble man, George."

"My darling, you do not know me yet."

"Well, dearest, I do not wish you to die for me, but I will tell you what you can do for me to show your affection."

"What is it, my darling? Shall I pluck the stars from the cerulean dome? Shall I say to the sea, 'ha! ha! cease to flow, for my love wills it! Shall I tell you bright and inconstant moon that is glinting the hill tops with her light, that she must not shine on thy face too roughly—ha!'"

"No, George, no." She smilingly said, "I do not wish you to attempt such impossibilities. All I ask of you is this—"

"Yes, my darling?"

"All I ask of you is this—don't call again."

The Man With a Cross Wife. This man may have high ambition and noble aspirations, yet he cannot be expected to enjoy very good health, especially if the lady scolds him while at meals. This is enough to give any man chronic dyspepsia. If he takes Brown's Iron Bitters he has a splendid chance for recovery. Mr. G. A. Wightman, Thomaston, Conn., says, "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for dyspepsia and have been greatly benefited by it."

DEATH OF SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

The Sage of Greystone Quietly Passes Away.

The Last Hours of His Life.

NEW YORK, August 4.—At a little before nine o'clock this morning Samuel J. Tilden died at Greystone. Mr. Tilden's death was wholly unexpected until twelve hours of the end. The ailments that caused the final collapse of his system made their appearance last Sunday, but there seemed then no reason to fear, for he had often suffered more pain and endured more serious disorders. He had been entertaining friends on Saturday, and when evening came he sat in the open air on the veranda until a late hour. This was nothing unusual for him, but there was a sudden change in the temperature during the night, and before Mr. Tilden withdrew to the house it was cooler by several degrees. As he turned to go within the house he was attacked with nausea and vomited violently. He suffered considerable pain for an hour or more, and the nausea was followed by diarrhea.

SCIENCE COMBATS NATURE. Dr. Charles E. Simmonds, a nephew of Mr. Tilden, was with him, as he has been all summer, and he immediately took the usual measures to check the disorder. The remedies were mild and soon produced a beneficial effect and Mr. Tilden was able to sleep well, and in the morning arose apparently as well as before. He had, however, taken a slight cold from his exposure the evening previous, and his physician exercised the most constant watchfulness over him to prevent any further trouble. He felt so well in the afternoon that he went out for a long drive, visiting all parts of his extensive estate, inspecting his highly-bred live stock, in which he took the greatest pride, and ending with a tour through the beautiful avenues of Yonkers. He seemed none the worse for his diversion and ate dinner as usual.

NATURE RETURNS TO THE ATTACK. But in the evening the nausea and diarrhea returned with redoubled force. Dr. Simmonds again resorted to his ordinary treatment, and again with good results. The patient suffered some pain during the night and failed to sleep as usual, but he was nevertheless much stronger on Monday morning than he had been many a time before in similar attacks. He was advised to remain indoors, for the weather, having cooled remarkably, affected his system unfavorably.

So thoroughly did Dr. Simmonds understand his patient's case that when Tuesday morning came he appeared to be in his usual health. He was not allowed, however, to venture out of doors, and occupied himself, according to his custom, in giving direction to his secretaries, hearing the papers read and dozing. In the afternoon, to Dr. Simmonds' surprise, the symptoms of trouble returned, and this time the difficulty of allaying the pain and nausea was greatly increased. It was not till ten o'clock in the evening that Mr. Tilden was restored to comfort. At about that hour, having rested easily for a short time, he started for his chamber. He was sitting in the library on the ground floor. As he rose Dr. Simmonds' side to assist him. Together they accompanied him up the broad, easy stairway.

DEATH'S PRESENCE RECOGNIZED. It was then the physician observed the certain signs of fatal weakness. Mr. Tilden walked very feebly and breathed with the greatest difficulty on gaining the top landing. His weak voice became almost inaudible, and it was only by a painful effort that he could speak at all. A chair was brought to the head of the stairs, and Mr. Tilden rested in it before attempting to go further. He was in great distress, for several minutes suffered extremely, while the physician administered mild restoratives. Presently he was taken up bodily and carried to his chamber and put to bed.

YIELDING THE VICTORY. From that time Mr. Tilden did not speak. His mind had lost none of its brilliant strength, and during Tuesday he was as bright and active mentally as he ever was. But his system was now approaching the final stage of decay, and with it his mind became not clouded, but quiet. From the time that he reached his bed Tuesday night until his death he suffered no pain. A faithful watch was kept by his bedside during the night by Miss Gould, Mr. Tilden's niece. He lay perfectly still until four o'clock, though it can not be said that he slept, for in the case of failure of the heart, as his last trouble was known, the patient gradually drifts into a comatose state. At four o'clock Mr. Tilden touched an electric annunciator at his bedside, and his valet immediately responded. Mr. Tilden was assisted to a chair where he sat quietly with his eyes half-closed. As he seemed to be in no dangerous condition, Miss Gould withdrew. At six o'clock she returned, and Dr. Simmonds came with her. The physician had been in the house all night; but had done nothing, as the case did not admit of treatment. He still had hope that the patient might rally, as he had so many times in the past. A careful scrutiny, however, convinced the doctor that his patient was slowly but surely failing, and a carriage was ordered to go for Dr. Samuel Swift, the leading physician of Yonkers, and an old friend of Mr. Tilden. Dr. Swift arrived at a little before eight o'clock. When he came into the room his face fell at once. He saw that death could not be avoided. The consultation of physicians was very brief, and without disagreement. All had been done that was possible, and there was nothing now but to await the end.

SURRENDER. It was not far off. It is not probable that Mr. Tilden was conscious when Dr. Swift arrived. His chair was near a favorite window looking to the south, from which a long and magnificent view of the Hudson and Palisades may be obtained. The dying man did not look up. He reclined in the chair as if asleep, and never rallied for an instant. At a quarter to nine all signs of breathing ceased. He died gently and without the faintest evidence of a struggle.

THE PHYSICIAN'S REVIEW.

Dr. Swift said to your correspondent this afternoon: "Mr. Tilden was never a strong man. He has been a confirmed invalid ever since he came to Yonkers, in 1879. But he has not been in better health during this period than during the last few months. He actually gained forty pounds in weight. His dead body weighed 165 pounds. His fatal illness was not due to any change or indiscretion of diet. In this matter, as in all others, he was most systematic. His nephew, Dr. Simmonds, has been his regular family physician for many years. He has spent his summers with Mr. Tilden, living in the house just beyond the Greystone mansion, and being the inseparable companion of the statesman in all his jaunts, whether in the steam yacht Viking or in the frequent carriage drives or short walks about his estate. In winter it has been his habit to come to Yonkers two or three times a week to see Mr. Tilden and give advice and instructions regarding his condition. I have been called when Simmonds was away, and, though this was not frequently the case, I yet knew Mr. Tilden's condition pretty thoroughly by observation, for I called at the house frequently. No man could live more strictly by rule than did Mr. Tilden. He asked me once to lunch with him whenever I chanced to be in the vicinity of Greystone, saying as he did so: 'I lunch at twelve o'clock on week days and at ten minutes past twelve on Sundays.' This was a serious rule with him, and shows how minutely he divided his time. Every hour of the day had its duty or exercise, and he conformed strictly to his rules even in the small matter of a difference of ten minutes in lunch time on Sundays. Just what made the difference I never knew. It may have been an extra long bath or a rubbing down, or any other thing to which he wished to devote more than usual attention. His personal diet was extremely simple, in spite of the magnificent entertainments he was accustomed to give his friends. It was to no abuse of his stomach that he owed his death, but to the unbalancing effects of a cold upon his delicate system. He might have lived ten years longer if he could have maintained the desirable equilibrium. His life was like a thread suspending a weight exactly proportioned to its strength; add ten grains to the weight and the thread breaks. The immediate effect of the cold contracted Saturday evening was to make his digestive system unable to do its work; the equilibrium was lost, and from that time he sank steadily. The technical term for the final ailment is 'failure of the heart,' and it means that the victim of it dies as a healthy man might fall asleep. My presence at the bedside was a mere formality. He was moribund when I reached his chamber."

Residents of Yonkers were generally surprised at Mr. Tilden's death, for it has been a matter of remark among them that he has been gaining in health and strength for some months past. He has been seen on the avenues driving and walking about his estate more frequently this summer than for years past. His paralysis had almost disappeared, the only evidence left, according to the physicians and townspeople who were privileged to meet him, being the weak voice and a slight tendency to palsy in the left hand.

THE FUNERAL. YONKERS, N. Y., Aug. 7.—This has been one of the saddest days in the history of Yonkers. All the city, with thousands from other places, turned out to do honor to the dead statesman. Many distinguished visitors were present, including President Cleveland, Secretary of War Endicott, Private Secretary Lamont and Gov. Hill. Secretary Manning, leaning upon the arm of Mr. John Bigelow, led the pallbearers. Mr. Manning seemed rather feeble, his steps being by no means sure as he came down the stairs. Mr. Bigelow's assistance was not unnecessary. The delegations from various bodies followed the pallbearers and took seats in the blue room. The Bar Association, headed by Wm. M. Everts, the New York Board of Aldermen, Tammany Hall, Irving Hall, the County Democratic Club and every other body entered the room with Secretary Endicott, Secretary Whitney and Mr. Lamont. Following next came the members of the family, Mr. Tilden's nephews and nieces.

The choir of the Madison avenue Presbyterian Church, which had taken up a position at the foot of the main staircase, sang "Abide With Me." Rev. Dr. Tucker next delivered a short address on the personal qualities of the deceased. The reverend gentleman spoke with great feeling, that several times evinced in choking his utterances. After this address, Miss Antonio Heene sang very effectively "One Sweetly Solenn Thought," and Tucker made another brief speech. The choir sang "Beyond the Smiling and the Weeping," and the casket was closed. The body was borne out to the hearse at 10:30, and carried to the train for New Lebanon. The President's Governor, Mayor, Cabinet officers and delegations followed with the pallbearers in twenty-five carriages.

Careful attention to diet is the best guard against disease. It is a fact which all should know, that over-eating not only corrupts the blood but destroys nerve force, and induces dyspepsia, jaundice, bad breath, piles, pimples, low spirits, headache, ague, malarial and all stomach and liver troubles. Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic quickly cures the above diseases. Can be taken by the most delicate. Price fifty cents. Sold by J. C. Saur.

A Democratic Gain. NASHVILLE, Aug. 6.—Yesterday elections in Tennessee were for five judges of the Supreme Court, and a full list of county officers, judges and clerks of every court in the state. Returns come in too slowly to enable figures to be given, but Democratic gains are everywhere reported and the best idea that can now be formed is that the Democratic state ticket is elected by 35,000, a Democratic gain of about 28,000 over two years ago. The majorities may reach 40,000, as every county so far as heard from, without exception has shown Democratic gains.

Care of Animals in Summer.

The American Humane Association presents the following suggestions relative to the care of animals during the heated term.

Provide water—fresh, pure water. Think, reader, how you are refreshed by a drink of cool water on a hot day. The lower animals are equally in need of the means of quenching thirst.

The active dog requires drink frequently during the hot day, as does also the cat, and a dish of fresh water should stand where they can have access to it. Undoubtedly many a dog is driven to madness through lack of water, and the testimony is that hydrophobia is almost unknown in those localities where dogs can drink when they wish.

Every city, village and country town should be liberally supplied with drinking fountains for animals, and they should be so constructed that even the smallest dogs can drink from them. No gift to a people confers a greater pleasure than a fountain, and that person who turns aside a stream from the field and gives a watering trough to the roadside, or provides a fountain at which man and beast can drink pure water, is truly a public benefactor.

Give the horse frequent opportunity to quench thirst at times when not too much over-heated, and before eating. To drink freely immediately after eating prevents a favorable digestion of food.

Provide shade. How instinctively we seek the shadow when the sun is pouring its hot rays on the dry and parching earth. If the pasture is not provided with shade trees, in a convenient locality set four, six or eight supports, across which place straw or grass, and thus, in a brief time and with little labor make a shade in which animals can rest from the heat of the sun, to the great comfort of themselves and benefit to their owners.

Remove the harness from the horses in the hot day whenever you desire to give them full rest, and once during the day, preferably at night, a thorough currying and grooming will not only give rest, but will do about as much towards improving the animal's condition as will the oats.

Examine the harness on your working team, and you will discover that blind, check-reins and cruppers are simply torturing contrivances, serving no useful purpose. Take them all off for the convenience of yourselves and the comfort of your horses. Keep the stable well ventilated and free from the strong ammonia, which is injurious to the eyes. Assist the animals to protect themselves against flies, feed regularly, hitch in the shade, and remember that the care which will give comfort to the lower animals will make them doubly profitable to their owners, aside from the humane bearing upon the subject.

Snow in August. Thesnow which is reported to have fallen yesterday morning in Northern New England would seem to foreshadow an early closing of the summer. But its occurrence need not be so alarming. It was due, not to an Arctic wave, but to the passage of a storm centre in which the barometer was very low for this period of the season, and descending air currents in the rear bringing down the cold air from the upper atmosphere. On August 1, 1875, light frosts occurred in Northeastern Pennsylvania, and on August 13, 1878, frosts were reported from Cape May; but in neither year was the summer cut short, and in the latter year both August and September were as warm as usual. Visitors at New England summer resorts may be warned by this unexpected "cold wave" to supply themselves with warm clothing, but it will not do to infer from it that all the intense summer heat is past.—N. Buyer of Bohemian Oats Ahead.

[Bloomville Record.]

The first genuine, clear-cut, unadulterated Bohemian oats law-suit in Bloomville took place last Tuesday. Henry Newhouse brought suit against Fred Maurer, before Squire Turner, J. P., growing out of a Bohemian oats transaction. The facts appear to be as follows: Maurer sold eight bushels of oats to Newhouse, taking his note payable in—months from date, and giving Newhouse at the same time a bond by the terms of which said note was not to be called for until twice the number of bushels, sixteen, were sold for Newhouse, said bond having the signature of a Mr. Railing as superintendent of a certain association. Maurer afterwards sold the note to a third party who collected the same of Newhouse. The parties having failed to sell oats for Newhouse according to terms of bond, Newhouse sued Maurer to recover the amount paid on the note. Verdict for the plaintiff. This makes parties who have given bonds liable, and does not require that the party bonded look to the company.

A Druggist's Story.

Mr. Isaac C. Chapman, Druggist, Newburg, N. Y., writes us: "I have for the past ten years sold a great gross of D. Williams' Hall's Balsam for the lungs. I can say of it what I cannot say of any other medicine. I have never heard a customer speak of it but to praise its virtues in the highest manner. I have recommended it in a great many cases of Whooping Cough, with the happiest effects. I have used it in my own family for many years; in fact, always have a bottle in the medicine closet ready for use."
